

Presently, I work from home almost exclusively. My personal office in the space is not even currently being utilized. When I am there I primarily work in the conference room, and it is usually to meet with clients or potential clients. My lease expires in June 2020, but I have an option for a 3-year renewal. I am willing to explore an office sharing arrangement with someone who might be looking to open their own practice or who already has their own practice, but might enjoy utilizing my space either because they don't have one or might wish to relocate. My preference would be that the individual not practice in the areas of personal injury or workers' compensation, but might be looking to expand their practice into these areas. The right person would likely benefit from referrals, and other possible business relationships are a possibility in the future.
